Investing in Watches

The Types

The Vintage watches (collectible)
- A Watch is considered vintage when its production has completely ceased.
- Characteristics: ancient style of production for the case, the movements ...

Wrist-watches
- The wrist-watch has been invented by Louis Cartier and Hans Wilsdorf in 1904.

Other type of Watches
- Pocket watches
- Table clock (really nice models have been produced by Cartier, Patek Philippe and Breguet)

Important investment categories

Growth Section: Exceptional contemporary watches
- Bet on the future
- A well defined purchase price
- An unknown future sale price
- High prices but not that much
- Perfect qualitative conditions

Value Section: Vintage watches
- A known market price
- Strong negotiation on purchase price
- High prices for exceptional models
- Limited stock with time
- Correlation between rarity and time
Precious Time

- Investing in very fine and important vintage watches (pocket and wrist watches) manufactured by Patek Philippe, Breguet, Rolex, Cartier, Audemars Piguet, Vacheron Constantin and many other watch manufacturers
- Target Return of 15% net of fees
- Liquidity profile of assets should allow full liquidation within 90 days in normal market conditions hence the fund will have quarterly liquidity
- Investment manager with a proven and extensive experience
- Committee of Experts composed of relevant professionals in watches and other fine art sectors
The Fund Manager
The Perfect Symbiosis between Finance and Watches

The Ref. 1518

Reference 1518 was launched in 1941 and according to literature, only 281 examples were produced up to 1954, the majority of which were cased in yellow gold, few in pink gold. Just four examples of 1518 cased in stainless steel are known. It was furthermore the first perpetual calendar chronograph wristwatch produced in series by any watch company.

This watch was sold for CHF 411,000 at Christie’s Geneva the 16th November 2009

* The official figures for the CHF inflation rate are back to 1971, no earlier figures are available. We took from 1945 to 1971 the US inflation rate as a proxy. The correlation from 1971 to 2010 is almost 60%, but the average in US was 4.40% vs 2.73% in CHF which means that our proxy is very conservative. If we compare these two values with the average inflation rate, 2.92%, it is clear that there was an incredible outperformance.

The Ref. 2499

Reference 2499, widely acknowledged as one of the world's greatest watch models ever created, was introduced to the market in 1950 to replace the reference 1518. Over a period of 35 years, reference 2499 was made in four series in a total production of only 349 pieces, the majority cased in yellow gold, very few pieces cased in pink gold. The rarity of this model becomes evident when considering that an annual average of only 9 watches left Patek Philippe's workshops.

This watch was sold for CHF 1,079,400 at Christie’s Geneva the 12th May 2008.

The Daytona “Paul Newman”

It is said that Paul Newman wore this watch until his death in 2008, and had done so since 1972. The watch was offered to him by his wife, Joanne Woodward, when Newman took up automobile racing. The original Daytona watches were not in demand when produced, and were quite inexpensive, but now they have gained rapid esteem amongst collectors, are known as the "Holy Grail" of collectible watches and reach considerable prices at auction.

This watch was sold for CHF 105,000 at Christie’s Geneva the 17th November 2008

During the early 1950's, Rolex launched reference 6062, considered by many collectors as the ultimate Rolex wristwatch. Reference 6062 is the pinnacle for the savvy Rolex connoisseur since it combines all key elements a demanding watch collector could expect: a sporty yet distinguished look, a complicated movement with full calendar and moon phases indication housed in the purist of all Oyster designs.

This watch was sold for CHF 597,000 at Christie’s Geneva the 16th November 2009.

The 13ZN, whose production started in 1936 (74 years ago!) can be safely considered as one of the best chronograph movements ever produced. Developed during World War II, it soon became a milestone of the watch industry. The 13ZN is still considered today as “The Chronograph” by scholarship and sophisticated collectors.
Launched in 1957, the celebrated Omega "Speedmaster" was the creation of Pierre Moinat, head of Omega's "creative" department, with the case designed by Claude Baillod and the prototype made by George Hartmann. The watch was originally aimed at "men who count time in seconds", i.e. automobile racers, athletes, engineers and scientists. As the thought of men on the moon was still in the realm of science fiction at the time, it was only later that it became the "Moon Watch".

This watch was sold for CHF 85,000 at Christie’s Geneva the 12th November 2007.
The Value of a Watch: 4 Golden Rules in the selection process

- Case Material
- Quality
- Special Features
- Historical Provenance
The Value of a Watch: Case Material

Watches have usually been cased with five different metals:

- Stainless Steel
- Yellow Gold
- Pink Gold
- White Gold
- Platinum

This rule DOES NOT apply to all the watch production.

For example the Patek Philippe ref. 1518 has never been produced in White Gold or Platinum, while the Rolex ref. 6541 has only been produced in Steel.
The Value of a Watch: Case Material

Same reference but different case material:

The Value of a Watch: Quality

Same reference but different quality:
The Value of a Watch, Special Features: “The Three Tones Dial” and “The Breguet Indices”

Same reference but one of the two has very Special Features:
The Value of a Watch, Special Features: “The Black Dial”

Same reference but one of the two has the most sought after Black Dial:

The “Steel Paradox”

Steel cased watches from the 40’s are extremely important and rare. Only a few examples have been produced and it is possible to count them on the fingers of just one hand per reference. Without exception, these watches are all proudly-cherished trophies in the world's most distinguished private watch collections.

How Expensive can a Watch be?

At a Christie’s auction, held on Monday May 10th 2010 in Geneva, a yellow gold Patek Philippe perpetual calendar chronograph, was the highlight of the evening. This beautiful piece, ref. no. 1527, was made in 1943 and sold on August 22nd 1946. Bidding ended at the sum of CHF 6,259,000; which is more than double the estimate of CHF 1,500,000 – CHF 2,500,000. This is almost $5,700,000, which makes it the most expensive yellow gold Patek Philippe ever auctioned.
